Refusing to live in the Presidential palace, President Ho Chi Minh lived in a normal electrician's house nearby. The house has two floors and the beloved President lived here from 1958 until he passed away.

4. One Pillar Pagoda

An ancient pagoda built in 1049 under the Ly Dynasty. There's an interesting legend referring the construction of the pagoda, telling that King Ly Thanh Tong had this pagoda constructed in the shape of a lotus, based upon his fairy dream, thanks to which he was given a baby boy.

5. Ho Chi Minh Museum

The museum was built in the shape of a white lotus flower, which is nearly 20m high, including 3 floors. More than 2,000 documents and show-pieces are displayed, systematically reflecting President Ho Chi Minh's life and revolution cause since the late 19th century. Coming here, tourists can share a part of Ho Chi Minh's tough life.

This is often cited as one of Hanoi's most picturesque tourist attractions. Originally built as a university in 1070 dedicated to Confucius, scholars, and sages, the building is extremely well preserved and is a superb example of traditional-style Vietnamese architecture.

This ancient site offers a lake of literature, the Well of Heavenly Clarity, turtle steles, pavilions, courtyards and passageways that were once used by royalty. Visiting the Temple of Literature you will discover historic buildings from the Ly and Tran dynasties in a revered place that has seen thousands of doctors' graduate in what has now become a memorial to education and literature.
